

POETRY.

BY W. GILMORE SIMMS—Author of Guy Rivers.

With an unassuming face,
And a manner soft and shy,
Love Imperial steals upon him,
When you little dream him high.
You may note his searching glance
In the absent-seeming eye,
You may trace him in the trace
Of a young idolatry.

There are spirits yet to win,
There are bosoms still to try,
And he deems it not a sin
To extend his sovereignty.
With a bribe of far more pow'r
Than the other kings may ply;
He can scale the haughty tower,
Though it rugged be and high.

He hath arm'd him with a spark
From a young and artless eye,
And he strikes the lofty mark,
Which would other force defy.
And the lofty tower goes down,
In the conflagration high;
And the chieftain leads he on,
In a far captivity.

In the wildest storm he soars
Safe as the farthest shore,
He assaults the farthest shore,
With a glance of victory.
Sleepless still, he comes apace,
When you little dream him high;
And he wins the hardest race,
That his erring wing may try.

He's the prince—the prince of pow'r,
And we bow to him alone;
He's the lord of tent and tower,
Of the cottage and the throne.
Peer and peasant, clime and hour,
All alike to him are known;
And we yield him up the flow'r
And the fruit of every zone.

THE BAY OF NAPLES.

It is evening and scarcely a breeze ruffles the calm bosom of the beautiful bay, which resembles a vast lake, reflecting on its glassy surface the bright sky above, and the thousand glittering spires which it is studied. Naples, with its white colonades, seen amidst the dark foliage of its terraced gardens, rises like an amphitheatre; lights stream from the windows, and fall on the sea beneath like columns of gold. The castle of St. Elmo crowning the centre; Vesuvius, like a sleeping giant in grim repose, whose awaking all dread, is to the left; and to the right are the vine-crowned heights of beautiful Varnero, with their palaces and villas peeping forth from the groves that surround them; while rising above it, the convent of Camaldoli lifts its head to the skies.

Resina, Portici, Castel-a-Mare, and the lovely shores of Sorrento, reach out from Vesuvius, as if they tried to embrace the isle of Capri, which forms the central object; and Paesilpa and Misenum, which in the distance seemed joined to Procida and Ischia, advance to meet the beautiful island on the right. The air as it leaves the shore, is laden with fragrance from the orange-trees and jasmine, so abundant round Naples; and the soft music of the guitar, or lively sound of the tambourine, marking the brisk movements of the tarantella, steals on the ear. But hark! a rich stream of music, silencing all other, is heard, and a golden barge advances; the oars keep time to the music, and each stroke of them sends forth a silvery light; numerous lamps attached to the boat, gives it at a little distance, the appearance of a vast shell of topaz floating on a sea of sapphire. Near and nearer draws this splendid pageant, the music fills more distinctly on the charmed ear—and one sees that its dulcet sounds are produced by a band of glittering musicians, clothed in royal liveries.

This illuminated barge is followed by another, with a silken canopy overhead, and the curtains drawn back to admit the balmy air. Cleopatra, when she sailed down the Cydnus, boasted not a more beautiful vessel; and, as it glides over the sea, it seems impelled by the music which precedes it, so perfectly does it keep time to its enchanting sounds, leaving a bright trace behind, like the memory of departed happiness. But who is he that guides this beauteous bark? His tall and slight figure is curved, and his snowy locks, falling over ruddy cheeks, shew that age has bent, but not broken him: he looks like one born to command—a hoary Neptune steering over his native element—all eyes are fixed on him, but his follow the glittering bark that precedes him. And who is she that has the seat of honor at his side? Her fair, large, and unmeaning face wears a placid smile; and those light blue eyes and fair ringlets speak her of another land; her lips, too, want the fine chiselling which marks those of the sunny clime of Italy; and the expression of her countenance has more in it of earth than heaven. Innumerable boats, filled with lords and ladies, follow, but intrude not on the privacy of this regal bark, which passes before us like the visions in a dream. He who steered was Ferdinand, king of the two Sicilies; and she who sat beside him was Maria-Louisa, ex-empress of France.—Book of Beauty.

A METAMORPHOSIS.

A countryman came to Paisley on business on Thursday, and was simple enough to allow John Barleycorn to drive from his cranium any little stock of wit that he had previously stored there. In sunstaring about he fell in with a soldier of the 78th, who had just been liberated from Bridewell, and who was ashamed after liberation to face his comrades. Into a tavern in Moss street the two went, and drowned any little cares that troubled them in a few noggins of Glenlivet. The soldier, eyeing his companion from top to toe, eulogised his handsome shape, and thought he would look amazingly handsome in the dress of a highlander. The idea tickled the fancy of the Irishman man; he agreed to the experiment, and in a few minutes, as to appearance, he might have been a companion to the gallant Charlie.—The soldier wondered at the same time how he would look in plain clothes—made the trial—was in ecstasies with his appearance—marched off in double-quick time, and has not since been heard of. By and by the Irishman man, who had fallen asleep in his new dress, awoke, and found his knees cold. He put down his hand to feel what was the matter; he found them bare! "There was nae holes in the knees of my breeks when I gied to sleep," said he, "and what's the matter now?" He opened his eyes, that visible as well as tangible evidence might be had of the state of his inexpressibles, when behold, a red coat, a kilt, tartan hose, and belt, bayonet, and bonnet met his eye!! He summoned memory, fancy, and judgment to his aid, rubbed his eyes in astonishment, but nothing could rub out the perception of the red coat, tartan kilt, and bare knees, and he at last exclaimed with the wife who had got a wee bit drapokky at the fair,

"This is no me."

On Friday, however, all doubts of his own identity were removed. He, on the one hand, appeared at the bar of the Police Office with a complaint against the soldier for robbing him of his clothes, while, on the other hand, an officer of the 78th appeared and craved for him that punishment to which, by the mutiny act, those are liable who aid and abet soldiers to desert. On a full consideration of the case, the Magistrates were convinced that the Irishman man had indeed been diddled out of six or seven pounds worth of clothes, together with the money in his breeches, without any intention of assisting the soldier's escape. He was therefore dismissed, and allowed, in borrowed toggery, to wend his way to Inchinnan, "a wiser and a better man."—Paisley Advertiser.

U. S. Circuit Court.—Job J. White, convicted of an assault upon Andrews, the Portuguese cook, on board the Kenduskeag at Santa Cruz, was sentenced to pay $10 fine, and be imprisoned in the State Prison at hard labor for one year. White is a tall, fine looking fellow, possessing an intellectual countenance, and evidenced remarkable address in the cross examination of some of the witnesses. The Courier gives the subjoined poetry as the effusion of his brain, which he handed in at the reporter's desk.—N. Y. Star.

"On my right hand a group of jurors sat
And listened close to a lawyer's chat.
When he had finished, an ugly negro came,
A Portuguese, and Andrews was his name.
He listened to an oath—then kissed the book,
And told his story with a savage look.
It makes the blood within my veins run cold
To hear such lies and contradictions told.
Then two men came up, and under oath
Made the first a liar—else they were liars both.
The lawyers then for Uncle Sam and liars
Made speeches, eloquent exceedingly;
But having done, they took a softer strain,
Forgot their rage and were good friends again.
Last, rose the judge with a majestic air,
And as he pleased discussed the whole affair.
He told the jury to keep the rest in awe,
And punish some to keep the rest in awe.
The obedient jury to their room retired
And found a verdict as the judge desired.
So I was done for—miserable sinner!
While the court adjourned and went to dinner."

PROSPECTUS OF THE

GLoucester Democrat and WORKINGMEN'S ADVOCATE.

At a time like the present, when the existence of republican institutions are at stake, it becomes the duty of every citizen to rally round the banner of FREEDOM AND THE CONSTITUTION. An enormous monied corporation has declared open war against the government and the welfare of our country—against the immediate representatives of the People—against the stability of our banks—the credit of our Merchants—the prosperity of our Agriculture, Manufactures and Commerce—and more than all, against our laws—our rights—and our GLORIOUS CONSTITUTION.

By creating a vast amount of distress and panic, and doing its utmost to make distress and panic infinitely greater, it has attempted to make Americans and Freemen Slaves to its will. The question now is, shall one man, who holds this monied power, rule the nation, or shall the People rule through their constituted and chosen organs?

A Band of desperadoes of the North, of the true blue dye, Nullifiers of the 3d act, under the Palmetto flag—bought tools of the People, who "buys men like cattle in the market," have leagued together for a general assault upon the "Supremacy of the Law."

The "People," who are sound in their political faith. Under ordinary circumstances, the address would not have been made to them. But during the past week the enemies of Republicanism, ever watchful of their opportunity, have obtained possession of the press and editor of the GLOUCESTER TELEGRAPH—a paper which has heretofore maintained "an honorable neutrality." It has become necessary therefore, that THE TRUTH should have an organ in Gloucester.

It is proposed to publish the GLOUCESTER DEMOCRAT and WORKINGMEN'S ADVOCATE on Tuesday's and Friday's at Two Dollars and Fifty Cents a year—payable in advance. CHARLES W. WOODBURY, Editor and Proprietor.

MONDAY, AUGUST 10, 1834.

Maine.—The Cumberland County Democratic Convention assembled at Gray on the 6th instant, and nominated the Hon. FRANCIS O. J. SMITH, as a candidate for re-election to Congress, and Josiah Pierce of Gorham, Jonathan Smith of Westbrook, Doct. Parinton of Danville, and Mr Latham of Gray, for Senators in the State Legislature. Of the re-election of Mr SMITH there can be no doubt—he is one of the most able men in his state, and as faithful a democrat as can be found in the Union. His political principles, and his ability to maintain them, have rendered him an object for the most venomous assaults of the opponents of the general administration, but he has passed through the ordeal unscathed, and is now one of the leading champions of popular rights in the East. His opponent, Churchill, is a renegade from the democratic party—a rank bankite, and will unquestionably receive a large vote from the Portland nabobs, but out of Portland he will get pretty essentially whittled.

The Bitter Bit.—We think the Bank has been overreached in its "fair business transactions" with some of the Wig editors. When it purchased them and their services, it was generally understood—and the enormous prices it paid fully confirmed the impression—that the unconditional and unlimited disposal of the opinions of those editors belonged to the Bank, of right, henceforward and forever—that it could fully rely upon them to support it in whatever steps it might see fit to take, and that they would be expected to sink or swim with it. But as soon as they received the full amount of their "facilities," and at a moment when the inability of the Bank to support itself became strikingly apparent, they fled from beneath its falling timbers, and carried into full practice the unpalatable doctrine of "the devil take the hindmost." Webb is, we believe, the only one who has proved faithful to the last—and, considering the immense amount he succeeded in drawing from the breeches-pocket fund, he would be an unconscionable dog if he were to flinch at any service required by the Money King. As to the refractory subjects, another sop will make them as peaceable as lambs, and for a middling doctor, they might easily be made to eat their words, and swear by the golden god of their idolatry, that the Bank and the Whig party were one and inseparable, and that upon the re-charter of the former depends not only the success, but the actual existence of the latter!

The Editor of the Gloucester Telegraph contradicts a part of our statement relative to himself and the Collector of that town, and appears nightly astonished that we should accuse him of falsehood—he was not guilty of it when he said that he paid the Collector for the news he received from the Custom House books? We have better authority than the evidence of an individual who has acknowledged that he uttered what was not true, that what we originally stated about the Telegraph man and the Collector is correct, and consequently we still believe it to be so, notwithstanding the squirming, partial denial of Gamaliel.

Offish.—Some of the opposition begin to think that eating a public dinner does not gain a political victory—the following hit at this practice was let off by the Newburyport Herald about the time of the Salem dinner:—

"We eschew public dinners on a great scale. The speeches here and vands poison you. Of course we do not mean to say that all men's speeches are tiresome. But after the crack speech, of the great orator, at all such celebrations, comes a series of sermons, which oppress you with their weight, or a discharge of flippant and sorry common places, which vex you with their emptiness. They are about as bad as the odes prepared for such occasions, which are proverbially cold strained or stupid. And then the toasts! every one of which must be cheered with stumps, hurrahs and smashing of wine glasses. Sense and nonsense, wit and stupidity, decency and indecency, come in for an equal share of the applauding uproar."

The Salmon Falls Fire.—From the Portsmouth Journal of Saturday morning we learn the following additional particulars relative to the melancholy event:—

The fire was discovered about 5 o'clock, in the lower part of the principal building, and is by some supposed to have originated from the picker, and by others from the spontaneous combustion of oiled wool. It had, when the alarm was given, gained such headway, that all the help at hand was unable to stop its progress and the stairway was on fire before the girls could descend, so that many of those who were saved had to rush through the flames. One was driven by the smoke and fire from room to room, till she reached the roof, where she held on by her hands, until compelled by the heat to let go, when she fell to the ground, and was so injured as to cause her death the same evening. Two other girls are said to be missing, supposed to be burnt.

Gentlemen from Salmon Falls, last evening, furnish us the following list of killed and wounded:—

Killed—Mary Nowell, of York; Lydia Varney of Eliot, and Harriet Hastings, of Wells.

Wounded—Sarah Nowell, of Portsmouth; Mary Jane Leavitt, of Acton, Maine; and Melitabie Wilkinson, more or less injured; — Thompson, leg broken.

Hail Storm.—We learn from the Haverhill Banner that that town was visited by a tremendous shower of hail on Thursday afternoon last. The hail stones measured from 1 to 7 inches in circumference, and not only injured vegetation to a considerable extent, but destroyed several thousand panes of glass. The flashes of lightning were very frequent and vivid, but did not in any instance reach the earth.

E. C. Purdy, Esq., the gentleman, who blew the "The Horn of the Green Mountain" some time ago, has sounded a note upon a ten penny trumpet in this city—we guess he'll never finish the tune.

The Indiana loan has been taken by Messrs. Prime, Ward & Co, J. & S. Joseph, of New York, and R. & J. Phillips, of Philadelphia, at one dollar and five cents the hundred dollars.

The Hon. Stephen Titus Hosmer, late Chief Justice of the State of Connecticut, died at his residence in Middletown, on Wednesday last, aged 71. He was an able lawyer, and an estimable man.

We should be glad to know the name of the Lawyer who advised to the commencement of Mr Hanscomb's libel suit against the Transcript.

The reported disappearance of a nun from the Convent at Charlestown, is untrue.

POLICE COURT.

Revolting Intemperance.—One of the most shocking and disheartening cases of an enfeebled female, which have recently fallen under the cognizance of the Court, was that of Margaret Kelley, tried on Saturday.—She was arrested on Friday night, by a watchman, for "uttering loud outcries and exclamations," at a stranger's door, in Salt lane. It appeared that when under the immediate influence of the stimulus, her moral sensibilities—otherwise obscured from her long continued indulgence in intemperance—experienced a gleam of latent life, and became in fact, during the intoxicating inspiration, morbidly acute; she would then dwell upon "her fallen state," and blasted hopes of earthly bliss, till she became frantic with shame and despair. Frenzied with inexpressible remorse, as unavailing as uncontrollable; feeling deeply and truly, her utter destitution of human succor and friendship—"an outcast from home and from heaven,"—she would seize her little child, scarcely six weeks of age, rush into the street, and "make night hideous" by her unearthly lamentations; and, wandering from street to street, without hope or aim, till exhausted by the violence of her emotions, she would sink, with her unoffending innocent, before the inhospitable door of some obdurate stranger. During the examination, she manifested the profoundest indifference, but gazed upon her babe—that smiled in its sleep upon her bosom—with the expressive sorrow of the forlorn Dane, when she sung—

"Yet, dear one, sleep—and sleep ye winds
That vex the restless brine—
When shall these eyes, my babe, be sealed
As peacefully as thine."

On account of her child, she was sent to the House of Industry, instead of the House of Correction, for six months.

Hugh Cassidy, according to his own account, had never drank a drop since he was born, till Friday night; and according to his wife's asseveration, he had never been the worse for liquor since the happy day that metamorphosed the twin into one. But notwithstanding the fact, that his corporeal machine had never been used as a steam-engine before, yet his maiden trip, with a charge of steam, appears to have exhibited the natural and appropriate characteristics of that powerful and volatile agent. His execution of the anti-rail-track locomotive-step, by which the oscillating body is propelled on both sides of the street at once, would have done honor to an experienced steamer; and the gallant ease and negligence of his bearing, when he ran down any opposing obstacle, affords just ground for the gratifying expectation, that he will soon become a crank, high pressure, and anti-safety-valve craft. After laying at anchor in the watch house about an hour, his consort hove alongside to hail him; but when Capt. Symmes went to awake him, he found that he had not let off all his steam, and when started, his paddles began to fly round like the sails of a windmill, knocking the captain about like a shuttlecock, till he was brought to, by a grapple of the watch hulk. His lower and upper spars were then securely lashed, and he was towed to jail, where he caused off considerably before morning, when it was thought $2.00 would repair all damages done to the dignity of the Commonwealth, by the bursting of his boiler.

Montgomery Dimond, a well dressed Rhode Islander, about 18 years of age, had been on a "steady haze" for a week, and had burrowed in the watch-house, on Thursday and Friday nights. On both occasions, when brought in, he ranked with the drunkest of the drunk. During the examination, he was too completely stupefied to comprehend the nature of the proceedings, or the danger of his position, in the eye of the law. Neither the judge nor the House of Correction appeared to have any terrors for him; and when the Court announced to him, that out of regard for his youth, sentence would be suspended, in order to allow him time to embark in a packet, he expressed neither surprise nor pleasure.

For the Boston Morning Post.

Great Failures.—The "distress," it seems, has not been confined to this country alone, nor even to this quarter of the Globe or this Hemisphere. In Calcutta, neglecting the small fry, and enumerating the great fish only, there have been ten failures, the aggregate amount of debts being between nineteen and twenty millions of pounds sterling, equal to nearly one hundred million of dollars! The cause undoubtedly is, the removal of the deposits, or the non-renewal of the Bank charter, or, at least, "the derangement of the currency" by the pernicious measures of the President and the "Kitchen Cabinet." If this be not the cause, we confidently ask, what is it? Can any one assign a probable cause, other than this? Here we see the ill effects of this policy, and their unlimited extent. Our distress, compared to that of the Asiatic countries, is, it appears, a mere trifle; and all this arises from the ignorance and obstinacy of Andrew Jackson. The deposits must be restored, and the Bank charter re-newed, or the whole world will go to ruin! We have not yet heard of the advent of a "distress petition" from Calcutta, owing, probably, to the great distance; but plenty of them will undoubtedly arrive, in season for the next session of Congress. Their effect cannot be otherwise than tremendous, appalling, irresistible. The Jackson party, the Republicans, will be completely routed, done up, extinguished, blown out, evaporated, horse, foot, and dragons—and thenceforth Henry Clay and the Wigs, will reign triumphant, restoring all things throughout the Globe, to their pristine purity and regularity. This second Jove will, by a well-aimed thunderbolt, dislodge the rash Phaeton from his seat on the box, and the chariot of the Sun will again resume its wonted course and its vivifying influence.—Jubilator!

A Challenge.—Norton, the Trumpeter, has challenged Gambati, another Professor of Music in New York, to a trial of skill upon the Trumpet at such time as the latter may determine. Norton says, at the conclusion of his challenge, that—

"The instruments to be used, shall be selected from any music store in this city. There are two Trumpets at this instant at the store of Mr Hewitt, Broadway, of equal 'calibre,' of which Mr G. may have the choice. And as Mr Gambati has twice played Handel's Song—"The Trumpet Shall Sound,"—with Mr Kyle, I will name another—"Let the Bright Seraphim,"—provided the aid of Mrs Austin can be obtained. Let Mr Gambati accompany that lady in the latter song, and I will accompany Mr Kyle in the former; we can then on the same evening change the arrangement, and I will accompany Mrs Austin, and Mr Gambati shall accompany Mr Kyle."

A letter, dated Portsmouth, Ohio, July 27, states that the cholera had raged in that town and its vicinity with much violence and fatality, but was then on the decline. Twelve fatal cases occurred on the 26th.

One of our mail papers says, "The breeches in the Delaware Canal have been repaired."

The Detroit papers state that the reports that the Cholera exists at that place are wholly untrue, and without a shadow of foundation.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

By the ship Chatham, Wood, arrived on Saturday, Liverpool dates to July 5th were received by the Messrs Toppliff.

The Queen of England was to embark on the 6th in the Royal George yacht for Rotterdam, escorted by frigate Castor, 36, Lord John Hay, and three steamers. Her Majesty intends to visit Germany.

The Absolute Powers are bent on the submission of the Swiss government to their projects.

It is stated the Portuguese government is about selling to the British government Goa and Macao, by which means they will replenish themselves with money.

Admiral Napier left London for Portsmouth on the 4th, to be present at the grand dinner to be given him; after which he was to return to London, when another great entertainment was to be given him, with a superb piece of plate.

In the House of Commons, 3d, there was a long debate on the Irish Coercion Bill. Lord Althorp presented the king's answer to the address respecting compensation to the officers and men engaged in the battle of Navarino.

The French Chambers are ordered, by the King, to meet on the last of July.

New York, Saturday Evening, Aug. 9.—Health of the City.—The man by the name of Allen, whom we mentioned in our morning edition as having been carried to the rooms under Bridewell, and as being last evening in a hopeless state, died about an hour after midnight. We have heard of but one new case to-day, and even that is not likely to prove fatal.

The Report of the Board of Health, issued to-day, announces seven fatal cases of Cholera from July 23d to the evening of the 7th, and seven more during the 36 hours ending to-day noon. This, we have no doubt, is a perfectly frank and undisguised statement; indeed it would be an impeachment on the integrity of the Board to suppose otherwise.—Jour. Com.

Cholera in New York.—Saturday's Journal of Commerce announces the Cholera in New York. As yet only eight or ten deaths have been reported, and those in different parts of the city—showing the disease to be endemic, and not contagious in the present instance. Two or three other cases, however, were said to look like contagion. There is said to be a good deal of spurious cholera reported. It does not appear that the citizens are much alarmed.—Ev. Gaz.

Quick Work.—$550 of the bills stolen from the Norfolk Bank, on Tuesday night or Wednesday morning last, was received by the Noon Mail on Saturday, by Messrs Gilbert & Sons, in a package from their New York correspondent. The Bank has refused to redeem them, and they are under protest. The robbers must have gone on to New York in the Wednesday's boat from Providence, and proceeded to exchange the bills with the brokers immediately, and before intelligence of the robbery could reach there. We learn that Mr Lemist, the President of the bank, was himself a passenger in the boat on Wednesday. He little thought there was any body on board who could give him such interesting accounts of the state of his Bank vaults.—Trans.

Theatricals Afloat.—There are several companies of Thespian performers on the Mississippi, in flat boats, fitted up as theatres. They float from plantation to plantation, and from town to town, and go wherever there is a probability of success. When business is dull at one point, they have nothing to do, but trip anchor and away. The aquatic theatricals originated on that river, with the Chapman family, who performed a few years since at the Walnut street Theatre; and it is said on the levee, that they did the speculation very profitably. Miss Caroline Chapman is the Fanny Kemble of the Western waters, and when she performs, the manager is always sure of a "good boat." For some time the Chapmans had the harvest of the waves all to themselves; the planters were delighted at the novelty, and wherever the theatre floated, it was sure to be loaded, before the hour of performance, down to the very guards. Since that golden period, it is reported that sundry interlopers have appeared and opened opposition establishments, to the great detriment of the regular drama. The spirit of competition may produce Steamboat Theatres on the father of rivers; high pressure Drury Lanes and low pressure Covent Gardens. We may live to see opera houses snaggled on the waters, as frequently as it happens on dry land.—Penn.

A merited tribute of respect was tendered the veteran patriot, Senator Grundy, at Chillicothe, Ohio, whilst journeying through that flourishing city, on his way to his residence in Tennessee. A correspondence appears in the last "Advertiser" of that place, which passed between him and a committee composed of some of the most respectable inhabitants, tending to him the honor of a public dinner—which his great desire to reach home as soon as possible, prevented him from accepting.—Pennsylvanian.

Anecdote.—As a number of gentlemen were standing together one day last week, gazing at the rare occurrence of a group of chimney sweeps scurrying through our village, with their voices pitched upon a key to correspond with the notice they attracted, a little boy of one of our panic leaders, who was standing near his father, inquired with great earnestness and simplicity, "Is that the distress, Pa?"—Windsor (Vt.) Rep.

Riot.—A somewhat serious riot occurred at the Five Points last evening at 6 o'clock. Several white men commenced an indiscriminate attack on the blacks and beat them severely. A number of officers were soon on the spot and captured the ringleaders, who were committed to Bridewell.—N. Y. Trans.

OBITUARY.

"The Body shall return to dust, and the Spirit to God who gave it."

Died, in this city, Mr WILLIAM DE CARTARE, in the 22d year of his age. In few young men do we find so many amiable qualities combined. His character was unsullied—in his reproach to his companions he was always mild, while his feelings of affection were beaming placidly in his countenance; his conduct towards his superiors was such as to reflect credit upon himself. In his filial and fraternal character, he was all that his fond friends could wish. He has left a widowed mother and his sisters to deplore his loss. In short he was respected and beloved by all who knew him.

The above Obituary is dedicated to his memory, by his young friends in Boston. Though he has taken his flight to another world, his name is engraved in lasting remembrance upon our hearts.

He took his flight away from earth

In manhood's early dawn.

Amidst our joy and youthful mirth

We're early called to mourn.
